PART IV.

Bill of the Bengal Council.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

THE following papers are published for general information:—

THE REPORT OF THE COMMISSION

ON

THE LABOUR DISTRICTS EMIGRATION ACT.

WE the Commissioners appointed by the Bengal Government Resolution of the 13th December 1880, to consider and amend the Labour Districts Emigration Act, VII (B.C.) of 1873, have the honor to make the following report.

2. We submit a copy of the proceedings at our meetings, and the draft of a Bill embodying the amendments which we consider desirable in the system of inland labour transport. Owing to the illness of Mr. Forsyth, Assistant Secretary to the Bengal Government in the Legislative Department, we have had no professional assistance in drawing up the Bill. This fact may perhaps serve to explain or extenuate any defects that may be found in its form and phraseology.

3. From the official and other papers laid before us, and from our own personal knowledge of the subject, we find that the present "Labour Districts Emigration Act" is defective in respect chiefly of the points numbered I to IV below—

I.—In that it does not afford sufficient encouragement to free emigration.

II.—In that it imposes unnecessary restrictions upon sirdari recruiting.

III.—In that it fails to provide for the enforcement of contracts made otherwise than under the provisions of the Act itself, even in the case of imported labourers.

IV.—In respect of the remedies provided for employers in the event of the unlawful absence, idleness, or desertion of their contract labourers.

4. The proceedings of the Bengal Legislative Council show that in 1873 the local Government recognized in some degree the propriety of encouraging "free emigration" and "free recruiting;" by the former of which terms was apparently meant the spontaneous and unsolicited emigration of natives of other parts of India to the labour districts, while the latter term was intended to apply to a system of inducing such natives to emigrate, and furnishing them with the means of doing so, carried on by, or on behalf of employers, without any supervision or control on the part of Government officers. The Lieutenant-Governor (Sir G. Campbell) seems indeed to have held that it was only the difficulty and expense then attending the conveyance of labourers to Assam which rendered it expedient to give to both employer and labourer the protection of a special law. Had communication been easy, and emigration for the purpose of finding employment common, no case would, in his view, have existed for applying any other than the ordinary law of master and servant. Sir G. Campbell does not, however, appear to have fully noticed the difficulties attendant upon the control of native imported labour in a country like Assam, and the impossibility of working it successfully without some more stringent sanctions than are afforded by the ordinary contract law. He did not specially consider whether the ordinary law of master and servant was in itself sufficient to meet the exigencies of the case. His first idea therefore, when amending Act II (B.C.) of 1870, was to allow any native of India to go as a free emigrant to the labour districts, but not to recognize any contract made by him before his arrival.

there, unless it were made under the provisions of the Labour Act. After arrival, this free immigrant might enter into any contract he pleased, but only under the ordinary law. He would be liable merely in damages if he broke it; and it was, owing to the competition for labour in the districts, generally to his interest to break it as soon and as often as he could. It was moreover at that time practically impossible for a native of the districts of Western Bengal and Behar to transfer himself and his family to the labour districts without substantial assistance in money from some source or other. But the scheme proposed by Sir. G. Campbell held out absolutely no inducements to an employer to incur the risk of making advances to defray the expenses of such emigration. While the labour law and this suggestion of the Lieutenant-Governor were under the consideration of the Bengal Council, the anticipations of scarcity in Behar gave the subject of emigration increased importance. It was contemplated that Government and private employers desiring labour should assist emigrants to reach the labour districts, and in order to draw forth such assistance from the tea planters, the Lieutenant-Governor modified his first suggestion so far as to propose that the law should recognize contracts made by emigrants at any place, and for any time, up to the limit of one year from the date of their arrival in the labour districts. But this contract was still only to be an agreement enforceable by suit under the ordinary civil law of contract: and the provisions of section 7 of Act VII (B. C. of 1873, in which the suggestion was ultimately embodied, have, so far as the free recruiting of emigrants and placing them upon contracts in their own districts is concerned, remained practically a dead letter.

5. No employer at present enters into a contract with an intending emigrant in the district of the emigrant's home, otherwise than under the provisions of the Act, and the impression has been general, among both employers and the officers of Government, that to recruit labour in Bengal or Behar, otherwise than in accordance with these provisions, was altogether illegal. This misconception of the law was exposed in a circular to district officers issued the year before last by the Government of Bengal on the representation of the Chief Commissioner of Assam; but it is certain that, so far as the districts of the Assam Valley are concerned, very little advantage has been taken hitherto of the concession embodied in section 7 of the Act. It is still not fully understood that a free emigrant may be put upon civil contract for a year in the district of his recruitment, and an Assam planter, especially in the remoter districts, does not care to run the risk of taking such an emigrant up to the garden at considerable expense, only to have him, in the absence of all legal engagement, enticed away by the liberal offers of some other employer, or to be met by a refusal to contract except upon the further payment of a substantial bonus.

6. In the case of Cachar and Sylhet there has been the same indifference to the permission given by the law to put an intending emigrant on contract for a year before he leaves his own district; but owing probably to the fact that transport to the Surma Valley has usually been by country boat, and subject therefore to but little interference and supervision, a practice has grown up of extensive free recruiting to supply the wants of those districts, the labourers being put upon contract for a year on their arrival there. (In some instances indeed the law has been directly evaded, and three-year contracts taken from such immigrants, on the theory that after arrival they became local labourers.) But, of course, no contract which is not made under the Act can be enforced otherwise than under the ordinary law, and though Act XIII of 1859 has been doubtfully applied to such local contracts in some districts, its provisions were obviously never intended to meet such cases. There is therefore a universal complaint that the employer is, in the absence of a penal law, insufficiently protected in respect of local contracts, and recourse is only had to the system of free recruiting in places where it has been tried, because the alternatives of contractors' recruiting and sirdari recruiting are under present restrictions unduly expensive.

7. The general conclusion arrived at not only by us but by all who have been consulted in the matter, is that, looking to the increased facilities of communication with the labour districts, to the fact that the conditions of labour there are now thoroughly understood by the class from which the labourers are drawn, to the greatly ameliorated condition of the labourers themselves in the tea districts, to the great importance of colonizing the eastern and relieving the pressure of population in the western districts of the Bengal Provinces, and to the urgent necessity at the present time of assisting the tea industry in which so much capital has been embarked, no unnecessary obstruction should now be thrown in the way of the emigration of natives of other parts of India to the labour districts under contracts made as in the Act provided; and that nothing should interfere with the making of such contracts by free emigrants and other local and time-expired labourers within the labour districts themselves.

8. Those employers who can draw a sufficient supply of labour to their tea gardens, without incurring the expense of employing a regular agency to recruit and to execute contracts in the recruiting districts, may be left to make their own arrangements. When free emigrants arrive ready to work for such employers, or where local labourers or others are willing to enter into contracts with them under the Act, they should be allowed to do so, it being provided that every labourer placing himself under the penal provisions of the Act shall be entitled also to benefit by its protective clauses. If any employer objects to this, he should be at full liberty to make with his labourers any contract which the ordinary law of the country will recognize and enforce.

9. On the other hand, there are districts more remote, and employers so locally circumstanced, as to make it necessary in their case that the emigrants going to recruit their labour force should be actually put on contract before leaving the province of their engagement. We propose to meet their wants by relieving sirdari recruiting of many of the restrictions which now apply to it.

10. At present the garden-sirdar is regarded with suspicion by the law, by the Magistrates of recruiting districts, and by his employer. The law compels him to present himself at the Magistrate's court of the district where he proposes to work, that he may get his license countersigned—a requirement which at once brings him into dubious relations with the cutcherry amlah. His certificate is only allowed to run for six months. He is not permitted to travel in company with another sirdar, if the total number of their united bands of emigrants exceeds twenty. If he recruits more than twenty emigrants himself, he must take them to a contractor's depôt, becoming to all intents and purposes a contractor's recruiter. The local Magistrates in the recruiting districts have done little to help, and in some instances much to hinder, the work of even bond fide garden-sirdars. The sirdars are kept hanging about the courts while enquiries are made by the police in regard to their recruits; or while the Magistrate is absent from the station or engaged on other work. They have to fee underlings to assist them in getting registration effected, and they find it often impossible, owing to the delays and 'hustling,' to keep together the emigrants they have with pains collected. At the same time the employer finds that he on his part has no control over the sirdar when once he has left the garden. His contract was to remain and labour on the garden, and when he arrives at his home, he not unfrequently ignores his employer entirely, and decides to remain where he is. He sometimes disappears altogether with the advances made to him, or fritters the money away, and then declares his inability to move until he gets further supplies. He is tempted by contractors' recruiters and crimps to make over to them for a consideration emigrants recruited at his employer's expense; either filling up their places with worthless substitutes, or declaring that the labourers deserted after taking the advances he had been instructed to offer them. When he is placed under the control of a contractor or his local representative, as is sometimes done, he generally becomes merely a recruiter with a free license, who collects emigrants for the contractor rather than for his employer, receiving a commission on every man he brings in. It must be remembered also that the whole of the local influence of the contractors and their professional recruiters is thrown into the scale against the bond fide garden-sirdar, who works only by himself and for his employer.

11. We have no doubt whatever that most of the abuses attendant upon the engagement of natives of India for emigration purposes have been attributable to the operations of professional contractors and recruiters: and we believe that the only way to put interprovincial emigration on a sound and natural basis, and at the same time to diminish the cost of procuring labour, is to sever all connection between garden-sirdars and contractors' depôts, and to give the widest scope to the working of the sirdari system; providing at the same time, in the employer's interests, for the effective control of the sirdars when engaged on recruiting duty. The fiction that the garden-sirdar is sent back to induce only his own immediate relatives to return to the garden where he has prospered must be given up. He must be recognized as a recruiter, but as a recruiter directly commissioned by the employer himself, with personal knowledge of a labourer's life, and of whom his employer has personal knowledge. He should not be allowed to degenerate into a professional crimp, and his certificate should therefore run only for a limited period, and be renewable only with the consent of the Magistrate of the Labour District.

12. We should have been glad to see the contractor and his recruiter abolished altogether. But apart from the injury to individuals which the summary closing of an industry would certainly inflict, it is probable that there are some gardens which are not yet in a position to employ sirdari recruiters, and must for the present depend upon professional assistance in procuring labour. Provision has, however, been made in the Bill drawn up by us for supplying by means of specially Licensed Local Agents the wants of new gardens when (as may be hoped will soon be the case) contractors and their depôts shall no longer exist.

13. On the subject of the defective provision in the present Act for the enforcement of locally-made contracts, and the treatment of unlawful absence and desertion of labourers in the labour districts, we can add nothing to the facts and arguments set forth in the letter to the Government of India from the Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Assam, No. 2065 of the 28th October last, and its enclosures. It is only necessary emphatically to endorse all that is there said as to the absolute necessity of providing a penal contract law to secure employers in the tea districts against the serious losses to which they would be liable under a system of purely civil contract. But we hold equally strongly the view that, if a labourer consents to subject himself to a penal labour law, he is entitled to demand also the protection of law in respect of his general relations with his employer. If he surrenders to some extent his freedom, the law must compel the employer to provide for his wants, must secure to him his wage, must protect him against overwork, and must shield him from ill-usage of all kinds. This being so, it seems by far the simplest plan that all penal contracts to labour should be made under the same Act. There is good reason to believe that local and time-expired labourers in the tea districts are fully alive to their own interests, and not likely to be coerced or deceived into making any contract of the terms of which they are in doubt, or which they disapprove. In deference to the almost unanimous wish of the tea-planters, we propose to permit the extension of the maximum term of contract under the Act to five years; but we think it probable that in most cases local contracts will continue to be made for shorter terms, and the only effect of bringing such contracts under the Act will be, that there will be no sudden disruption or change in the position of imported labourers when the term of their first engagement comes to an end. They will simply make a fresh bargain in full knowledge of all its conditions, and will continue to receive the same protection as during the first term of their residence in the labour districts.

14. With these preliminary observations, explanatory of the general policy we have adopted, we proceed to notice in detail the amendments and alterations proposed by us in the Labour Law.

Sections of Act VII (B.C.) of 1878.	Corresponding sections of the Draft Bill.	Explanatory remarks by the Commission.
Preamble	Preamble	The last clauses of the preamble have been altered to indicate the extended purview of the proposed law. Instead of providing merely for the protection of persons proceeding under contract to the labour districts, and for the enforcement of contracts of service entered into by them, it is proposed to provide generally for the enforcement of contracts of service made under the Act, and for the protection of all persons entering into such contracts.

Sections of Act VII (B.C.) of 1873.	Corresponding sections of the Draft Bill.	Explanatory remarks by the Commission.
1 & 2	1 & 2	The necessary verbal changes have been made in the 'Title' and 'Repealing Section.'
3	3	In the interpretation clause the following additions and alterations have been made :— (1).—A definition of the term ' Local Government ' has been given, by which the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and the Chief Commissioner of Assam respectively will exercise within the districts subject to their several jurisdictions the powers given by law to the ' Local Government.' There being two ' labour districts ' under the Lieutenant-Governor, it is necessary to employ a phrase that will cover both the Lieutenant-Governor and the Chief Commissioner in respect of matters with which both must deal. (2).—To simplify the wording of many sections, the phrases ' Inspector ' and ' Assistant Inspector ' are defined to mean respectively ' Inspector of Labourers ' and ' Assistant Inspector of Labourers ' under the Act. (3).—To remove doubts, it is expressly stated that a ' garden-sirdar ' may be either ' male or female.' The employment of female sirdar recruiters, who are generally the wives of garden-sirdars, is very desirable. The Magistrate can always refuse to countersign the certificate of any objectionable female. (4).—The ' Local Agent ' is practically a new creation of this Bill, although in some districts, Calcutta Agency houses at present employ a class of local agents, taking out for them either contractors' or recruiters' licenses. His duties and responsibilities are defined in sections 21 to 23. The intention is that he should control the operations of garden-sirdars in the recruiting districts, provide them with the necessary funds, and act generally as the representative of his employer. He can never, under any circumstances, be a contractor; but with the special permission of his employers, and special license from Government, a local agent may be allowed to engage labourers for new gardens without the intervention of a garden-sirdar. (5).—A provision is made in section 45 for licensing ' sub-contractors,' and a ' sub-contractor ' is here defined to be a contractor's local representative. It is better to bring such men under control by recognizing them formally in the Act, than, as at present, either to ignore them, or compel them to take out recruiters' licenses. (6).—The definitions of ' Emigrant ' and ' Labourer ' have been modified to suit the policy of the Bill. ' Emigrant ' will now merely mean a Native of India, of the age of 16 years or upwards, who proceeds to emigrate, while ' labourer ' will mean any labourer who has made a contract

		under the Act. A definition of 'dependent' has been inserted to meet doubts which have arisen in practice, and save a separate section in the body of the Bill (7.)—'Estate' is defined to mean the lands upon which any labourers (as well labourers defined in this Act as others) have been engaged to labour. This, with the definition of 'Manager,' is necessary to meet the case of gardens employing imported free labour from which returns are necessary for statistical purposes. (8.)—'Rule,' is defined to mean a rule formally made and duly notified under sections 5 and 6 of the Bill.
	4	A power is given to the local Government to exempt any labour district from the provisions of the Bill. It is probable that Sylhet, and very possible that Cachar, may be able shortly to do without any special Labour law.
4	5 & 6	A distinction has been drawn in section 5 between those rules which either of the two local Governments concerned may be called upon to make for its own province, and those which the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal alone, or the Chief Commissioner of Assam alone, will have to frame. The description of the subject matter of the rules has been made in some instances more precise, and in some more general. Any changes made in substance will be more conveniently noticed in connection with the sections of the law to which the clauses severally refer. We would, however, specially draw the attention of Government to the importance of having all rules carefully framed as far as possible in consultation with the leading representatives of the interests affected by them. So much important detail is left to be regulated by rules that full publicity and opportunity of discussing their bearing should be given to those concerned before they are finally passed by Government.
	7	This is a new section, and provides that any sums advanced by any Government officer under certain sections of the Bill on behalf of an employer, a garden-sirdar, a contractor, or the master of a vessel, shall be recoverable under the Public Demands Recovery Act, VII (B.C.) of 1880, which it is presumed will be extended to Assam. If it is not so extended, the advances should be made recoverable by civil suit.
5	8	All contracts under the Act, and all arrears of wages due under such contracts, are made, as at present, a charge upon the estate, and will be transferred therewith. When the labourer contracts to labour upon any one of several estates belonging to the same employer, it is provided that the contract is to be a charge upon the estate on which the labourer may for the time being actually labour.
6	9	The present Act enables a native, when above the age of 16 years to make a valid contract under the Act. It is proposed to say of or above that age, which is practically the way in which the law is interpreted and worked.

Sections of Act VII (B.C.) of 1873.	Corresponding sections of the Draft Bill.	Explanatory remarks by the Commission.
15	10	The section regulating the terms of a contract under the Act is brought into the preliminary chapter as being now intended to be a section of general application, regulating the contracts of local as well as of immigrant 'labourers.' We have raised the maximum limit of time to five years, and provided for payment in accordance with the system of task-work universal in the labour districts. It has been thought essential to provide for a minimum rate of wage for a fully completed task, and for a higher minimum in the fourth and fifth years of service, to which it is proposed that the contract term may now be extended. These changes have been made in accordance with the almost unanimous demand of those interested in the tea industry, concurred in by both the Chief Commissioner of Assam and the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. The argument in favour of the extension of term is that it is only thus that the employer can be fairly recouped his preliminary outlay and risk in importing the labourer and maintaining him while he gets acclimatized and learns his work. Looking, however, to the fact that a time-expired labourer can now always command a bonus on re-engagement, we consider that he is entitled to higher wages for the same amount of work in the later years of his service. He will, moreover, ordinarily be able to get through his task more quickly, and thus earn by extra work a full remuneration for his own improved capacity. Provision is further made for the deputation of a garden-sirdar on recruiting duty during the currency of his contract. It is proposed that the contract should be either to work upon any specified estate, or upon any estate belonging to the employer in the same labour district, as the parties to the contract may desire. Labourers frequently wish to work on some particular and favourite garden. On the other hand they may be ready to work indifferently on any garden belonging to their employer in a certain neighbourhood. But where the engagement is thus general in terms, the labourer is protected against separation from his immediate family. The form of contract has been simplified, so as to be suitable for execution either in the recruiting districts or in the labour districts. Specific reference is made in it to the supply of house accommodation, medical attendance, food-grain and rations, because those are matters which ought to be brought under the notice of the intending labourer. It is presumed that the rules of the local Government on the supplying of food-grains will be furnished to every registering officer, so that he may be in a position to give the necessary information to emigrants brought before him for registration.
Schedule A.	Schedule A.	7 11 Section 7 of the present Act prevents the execution of contracts to labour in the labour districts for more than one year, save under the provisions of the Act. In accordance with the policy already explained, section 11 of the Bill permits the free execution of contracts to be enforced only under the ordinary civil law. It also declares in unequivocal terms the legality of free emigration. But

		it maintains the protection now given to emigrants (i.e. to persons not natives of the labour districts), who may accept in ignorance an engagement to work on a garden declared unfit for the residence of such emigrants when on contract under the Act.
8	12	No change has been made in the general section regarding penalties; but to remove doubts, it is provided that all fines under the Act are to be recoverable under the Criminal Procedure Code.
9	13	The section relating to procedure on trial of offences remains unchanged.
10 & 11	14 & 15	The section conferring on the local Government the power of forbidding emigration and immigration under the Act has been made more general, but the previous sanction of the Supreme Government ought, in our opinion, to be required to an order affecting the interests of more than one province.
12	16	The section providing for the appointment of officers and their subordinate establishments is made more general in its wording. It will probably be found desirable to appoint more than one Superintendent of Emigration. The Government can under the rules define the duties of each; and it is provided elsewhere in the Bill that Government shall also determine which of the Superintendents under it shall license contractors, &c. The same remarks apply in respect of embarkation officers, and their power to license vessels. We attach special importance to the appointment of as many registering officers as possible. At present the delay and expense caused by there being only one Magistrate at each station empowered to register are very serious. There seems to be no good reason why the Civil Surgeon, or any other officer of Government, or any Honorary Magistrate, should not act as a registering officer.
13, 16 to 32	17 to 44	Sections 17 to 44 contain our scheme of sirdari recruiting. In the first place, the certificate granted to the sirdar must set forth the principal points in the instructions given him by his employer, and, as disobedience in respect of certain of these instructions will subject him to penalties, he is required to accept and sign the certificate in the presence of the Inspector or a Magistrate of the labour district. The certificate will be in force for 12 months; but if the employer finds that any sirdar is a good recruiter, he may, with the consent of the Inspector or Magistrate of the Labour District, renew his certificate from time to time. The certificate need not be countersigned by the Magistrate of the recruiting district; nor is the sirdar bound to take his recruits for registration to such Magistrate. He may do so if most convenient, or he may start on his journey with them, and put them on contract at any registering station to which he may come on his way to the labour districts; provided only that he puts them on contract before he leaves the province of Bengal. This provision is intended to save delays, and to enable an employer to secure the registration of his labourers at the place where he may find it most

		convenient to keep a 'local agent.' The Government of Bengal will, it is hoped, multiply the facilities of registration by recognizing as many stations as possible. It is not proposed that special stations should be set apart for the registration of emigrants belonging to particular tracts of country. But no doubt in practice the tendency will be to put emigrants on contract at such places as Raneegunge and Hooghly, where there would ordinarily be a break in the journey; Raneegunge being the station where Chota Nagpore emigrants would take advantage of the railway, and Hooghly being the place where emigrants booked through to the Northern Bengal State Railway might be required to cross the river, so as to avoid Calcutta. The garden-sirdar will take emigrants with him out of their own district at his proper risk. If they decline on reasonable grounds to contract when brought before a registering officer, they will be returned to their homes at the employer's expense. No medical examination as to an emigrant's fitness to labour will be made as a matter of course; but if the employer wishes to secure such an examination, he will only have to note this on his sirdar's certificate, and the registering officer will see that the instruction has been attended to. Any Government medical officer will be bound to make the examination on payment to him of a fee of eight annas per labourer; or the employer or his local agent may make their own arrangements with any qualified medical man. An emigrant who unreasonably refuses to contract after money has been spent in bringing him to a district other than his own, will be liable to penalty. Any registering officer may prevent the emigration of any native brought before him who seems unfit to travel, or affected with disease dangerous to others, if on medical examination these facts are established. Garden-sirdars are to be allowed to make their own arrangements for the accommodation of their emigrants; and any central depôts provided by them will be subject only to reasonable sanitary supervision. No restriction will be imposed on the number of labourers a sirdar may recruit; but every gang of 20 labourers going to the labour districts must be in charge of a responsible person, who will look after them and pay their way. To further economy, it is provided that a garden-sirdar may, with the consent of his employer's local agent, take charge of emigrants engaged for another employer, so long as his gang does not exceed twenty. Garden-sirdars failing to carry out their orders with reference to putting emigrants on contract, or deserting or embezzling moneys, or abandoning labourers en route, will be liable to prosecution wherever found, and the employer's local agent may prosecute in all such cases. The sirdar is made liable to minor penalties if he play into the hands of contractors, or have any working connection with contractors or contractors' subordinates. Every gang of labourers will be accompanied by a nominal way-bill, on which all casualties will be noted, and which will eventually be returned by

33 to 51	45-66	the employer to the Superintendent of Emigration. There with thus be a complete record of the working of the system of sirdari recruiting in the Superintendent's office, obtained with the minimum amount of trouble to all concerned. Any Magistrate or Embarkation Agent or Inspecting Officer en route may detain any labourer or dependent found unfit to travel, or diseased in a manner to be dangerous to others. If any employer desires to have his labourers brought through Calcutta and inspected by his agents there, this can be done under section 43, even although the contract may have already been executed at another registering station. But little substantial alteration has been made in the sections relating to contractors and the operations of contractors' recruiting. Provision has been made, as above noticed, for the licensing of sub-contractors. The power of the Superintendent to cancel licenses during their currency for misconduct has been made more clear. The forms of licenses have been left to be regulated by rule. Contractors are to be bound to establish depôts wherever the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal considers these necessary. They have also been made civilly liable for the conduct of their subordinates. The medical examination of intending emigrants has been restricted to ascertaining whether they are fit to travel and free from contagious disease. It has been made clear here (as well as in the chapter on sirdari recruiting) that the registration fee is to be paid on every native produced for registration, whether eventually rejected or not. The work imposed on a registering officer is greater in the case of a rejected than in that of an accepted labourer.
52 to 60	67 to 76	The sections for the regulation of contractors' depôts remain substantially unaltered. The functions of the Medical Inspector in connection with the depôt have been more clearly defined, and his examination of the labourers is confined to ascertaining their continued freedom from contagious disease, and their fitness to travel to the labour districts. In section 76 provision is made for the supply of way-bills to gangs of labourers sent from contractors' depôts in the same manner as in the case of sirdari gangs.
61 to 94	77 to 99	An important change has been made in the provisions relating to transport. The present law deals only with the transport of 'emigrants' as there defined; that is to say, labourers under contract, and natives of India under actual engagement to contract with some particular person, special provision being made in certain matters for the protection of the former class. In view of the fact that, if free emigration developes, the number of native passengers by river steamer and country boat who are under no actual engagement may form the majority of those travelling by such means of conveyance, it seems necessary to give the Government a power of enforcing general sanitary regulations without reference to the classification of passengers. Accordingly provision is made for licensing all vessels carrying more than twenty native passengers, and a power is taken in section 5 to make

		rules for the ventilation, cleanliness, and water-supply of all such vessels, and for their inspection on the Assam rivers. But, lest any such system of licensing should interfere unduly with the ordinary river traffic in country boats, the local Government is authorized to relieve any vessels or class of vessels from the obligation of obtaining license. This being the general principle on which the Chapter on 'Transport' has been framed, we proceed to notice a few of the modifications in detail.
	77	The transport of native passengers and emigrants to Chittagong must apparently be regulated by the Native Passengers Act of 1876; accordingly we have declared that the provisions of the Bill will not apply to such transport.
62 & 63	78 & 79	These sections are modified in accordance with the general principle above described; but the fee for license for a single voyage is reduced to a maximum of Rs. 16, instead of four annas per labourer carried, and provision is made for the grant of periodical licenses to vessels running regularly. It is probable, that very shortly there may be, if not a daily, at any rate a bi-weekly, accelerated steam service between Dhubri and Debrooghur. It would be intolerable to subject these vessels to measurement for license before every voyage, or to charge them a heavy license fee on each occasion. The provisions of the law to ensure punctual despatch, and prevent overcrowding have been modified to suit the new system.
61, 67 & 68	83	It is believed that, with a proper system of way-bills, it is unnecessary to maintain any express provisions of law for embarkation passes and lists. The way-bills of all gangs of labourers received on board should be kept by the master during the voyage, and the master (or medical officer) should enter on these all casualties occurring on board. He need then only submit such returns of "gangs" and casualties as the Government may by rule prescribe. The long nominal lists and multifarious passes, may be entirely dispensed with.
69 & 70	84 & 85	The arrangements for labourers on board must continue to be regulated by rule, but as under arrangements now coming into force the provisions and medical officer will be supplied by the steamer companies, these sections have been modified to meet the present requirements. All medical officers employed must hold a Government license, and be liable to removal for misconduct.
72	87	It is unnecessary to provide in the law for detention of vessels at all Magistrates' stations. The local Government can most conveniently arrange by rule all such points of detail, and the section has been modified accordingly.
73 to 78	90	The powers of an Inspecting Magistrate to detain vessels on account of disease among the passengers are restricted somewhat, in order to meet the requirements of the present accelerated service.
81 to 88	95	It is proposed to leave all the procedure for disembarking labourers, and despatching them to their destination, to be regulated by rules, which can be modified to suit local and varying circumstances.

Sections of Act VII (B.C.) of 1873.	Corresponding sections of the Draft Bill.	Explanatory remarks by the Commission.
89	96	At present the Magistrate of the district or division can only depute a subordinate Magistrate to do inspection duty. It is proposed to allow him also to depute any medical or gazetted police officer.
93 & 94	...	These sections are rendered unnecessary by the changes made in other parts of the draft Bill.
95-99	100-102	We propose in sections 27 and 61 to reduce the registration fee to a maximum of one rupee per head. In section 105 a similar fee is proposed for the registration of local contracts under the Act. In section 100 the same maximum is provided for the yearly rate. Looking to the large number of locally engaged labourers that are likely to come under the Act, it is probable that a very much smaller sum will bring in the income necessary to defray the cost of working the Act. We strongly recommend that the Government should adopt a sliding scale of registration fees with reference to the length of the contract term. It is not advisable to throw any obstacle in the way of the registration of local agreements under the Act, and if local contracts are generally made for one year only, it will be unfair to charge the full registration fee on every renewal. For the reasons set forth in the proceedings of our Fifth Meeting, to which we would specially invite a reference, we have decided to recommend that no more income should be raised by fees and rates than is actually sufficient to pay for the Government machinery required to work the Act. Any surplus accruing should, as in the case of the zemindari dāk cess, be appropriated to reducing the fees and rates for the following year. These sections are modified to give effect to these views; but the rate is made recoverable under the Public Demands Recovery Act, 1880. If that Act is not extended to Assam, the provisions of the present law may be restored.
	103-106	These sections provide for the execution of contracts under the Act by locally engaged labourers, whether immigrants or residents.
98-105	107-111	The provisions of the law regarding returns and registers to be made and kept by employers have been modified in the manner recommended by us at our Fourth Meeting. It is necessary for statistical purposes to provide for the submission of returns of imported labour in certain cases even when not on contract under the Act, and for the inspection of such labourers, and this has been done. The duties of Inspectors are left to be more particularly defined by rules. But we would suggest that in any such rules it should be provided that the Inspector shall, if possible, give notice of his intention to visit a garden for the purpose of mustering the labourers. It may often be very inconvenient to an employer to have to call them off their work without notice or preparation.
106 to 109.	112 to 116.	The procedure for regulating task-work, and the payment of the labourer, is made more precise; and while the employer is relieved of the obligation of submitting the schedule to the Inspector in the first place, the Inspector is empowered to order the alteration of anything that seems unreasonable, subject only to an appeal by the

110 to 112.	117 to 120.	employer to a Committee. As the employer will now under section 131 have an easy remedy in all cases of unlawful absence from work, we have made it clear that every labourer is entitled to his weekly day of rest, and to wages on that day. If he absents himself from work on other days, the proper course for his employer to follow is to report him to the Inspector, not to compel him to work on the only day he can claim for marketing or going about his own affairs. A new provision is inserted to meet the case of labourers who, though not actually sick, are weakly and unable to earn as much as half the minimum rate of wage.
113 to 117.	121 to 127.	In the sections relating to "Incapacity to labour," a new provision has been made for occasional absences of the labourer, caused by sickness, not being of such a permanent character as to warrant the interference of the Inspector and the suspension of the contract. It is proposed to allow 30 days' grace on this account in the year on half-pay only, after which the days of absence will be added to the contract, unless the labourer shall refund the subsistence allowance drawn by him during absence. This section will only apply to absence from work caused by sickness; and seems therefore a concession which it is reasonable to make to the labourer, especially as we have below given the employer an easy remedy against unauthorised absence of other kinds. The most important change under the heading "Necessary provision for labourers" is the omission from the contract of all reference to the supply of rice. In the prospect of emigrants from Behar forming in future a large majority of the labour force of the province, it seemed unreasonable to stipulate for the supply of rice only. On careful consideration of the whole question, we have come to the conclusion that the best plan is to give power to the local Government to make rules for the supply to labourers of the staple food-grain suited to each class, when this is not procurable at reasonable rates in the local markets. The Government may, we think, be trusted to determine, on equitable principles, what are reasonable rates, and at what prices the employer should supply his labourers. Local circumstances vary so greatly that what may be reasonable in one district would be most unfair in another, but no doubt the matter would always have to be regulated by reference to the labourer's wage as the ultimate standard. We have also made provision for a modified system of rationing in exceptional cases. In the case of Behar labourers a reasonable system of rationing in the early months of service will, we believe, often prevent serious mortality. We recognise, however, all the difficulties attendant on the introduction of any such system; and our proposals are therefore of a moderate and tentative character. The wording of the section regarding hospital accommodation and medical attendance has been made more general, so as to enable the Government to sanction necessary arrangements in a manner as little burdensome as possible to individual employers.

118 to 120	126 to 130	The only change in the chapter relating to localities unfit for the residence of labourers is that provision has been made for closing a garden against some particular class of labourers without barring the employment of all labourers.
121	131	At present the penalty for unlawful absence of the labourer from his work can only be enforced by complaint before a Magistrate. An employer cannot, however, spare time to make journeys to court every time one of his labourers plays truant. It is proposed therefore to allow him to submit to the Inspector a monthly list of defaulters, giving at the same time notice to each such defaulter that he has entered him in the list. The Inspector will, on his next visit, enquire into each case and endorse the days of absence on the contract, unless the labourer agrees to forfeit four annas for each day of absence. Prolonged and repeated absence may still be punished by a Magistrate, if the employer chooses to complain, and the penalties for this have been made more severe.
122	132 to 134	The sections regarding "desertion" have been modified in the manner recommended by the Chief Commissioner of Assam. The deserter may be arrested without warrant, but he must be taken to the nearest police-station where, after his statement and that of the captor have been recorded, he may be taken back to the estate of his employer. The Magistrate will, on perusal of the statements, judge if further enquiry is necessary and act accordingly.
	135	A new section has been inserted, providing a punishment for habitual drunkenness and wilful disregard of sanitary regulations. In most Colonial Ordinances cognizance is taken of the former offence; and as regards the latter, it seems to us that, where the consequence of sanitary neglect may be so serious to the employer, he should have some means of punishing wilful offenders against duly promulgated orders.
128	141	As recommended by the Chief Commissioner of Assam, rigorous imprisonment for one month has been provided as a possible punishment for enticing away or harbouring labourers.
129	142	Under the heading of 'Complaints by labourers,' it is provided that a labourer desiring to complain must be sent by his employer to the Inspector or Magistrate. But to prevent stoppage of work by the labourers complaining en masse , it is proposed that, if more than ten labourers come forward to complain, the employer shall send notice to the Inspector or Magistrate to come and enquire. The present Act only takes notice of complaints to an Inspector; but it seems desirable to extend the procedure under the chapter so as to allow complaints to any Magistrate. Such complaints would not always fall within the purview of the Indian Penal Code and Criminal Procedure Code or even necessarily have reference to a distinct offence under the Labour Act and Rules. The labourer should be allowed to bring anything that he feels to be a grievance before the nearest protective officer. When a labourer is sent in to make his complaint, the employer would

134	147	probably send a peon with him to prevent desertion. Provision is therefore made in section 142 for the award of compensation to the employer if the complaint is shown to be untrue or frivolous.
136, 138	149	Provision is made for the immediate recovery of wages due to a labourer whose contract has determined. The employer has no right to keep such a man on his garden by detaining his wages.
137	150	Instead of leaving the completion of the contract to be registered and endorsed by the Inspector, the obligation is thrown upon the employer of endorsing on the contract of each labourer the fact of its determination. The labourer will keep this as equivalent to a discharge certificate, and the other endorsements on the contract will show any new employer what the labourer's conduct has been during his former engagement.
Sche- dules B to F	.....	The labourer is given the right to redeem the contract of any member of his family as well as his own, and the value now fixed for the unexpired period of the third year of any contract has been declared to extend to unexpired periods of the fourth and fifth years.
		It is much more convenient to leave all forms to be laid down by rules of the local Government.

15. In conclusion, we desire to urge upon Government, not merely in the interests of the tea industry, but in those of the whole province, the importance of devoting continued attention to the improvement of communications with and throughout the Labour Districts of the Assam and Surmah Valleys. We believe that it is in this way, rather than by any scheme of Government emigration, that the waste lands of Assam will ultimately be colonised and reclaimed. Every year sees an increase in the numbers of the resident population, brought there in the first instance to meet the requirements of tea cultivation. If communication is made easy, rapid, and cheap, we cannot doubt that in time there will set in a natural spontaneous emigration from the over-peopled districts of North Behar to the fertile rice-tracts of Assam. Every Behari labourer who can be kept in health during his contract term, and returned to his home as a garden-sirdar, serves as a living stimulus to bring about such a movement. It is to Behar and the North-West that the tea-planters must in the future mainly look for their supply of labour. It is to Behar and the North-West that the Government must look for the working population to reclaim the wastes of its North-Eastern Frontier. In this view we feel it right to place in the very foreground of all schemes of improvement (apart from the introduction of an accelerated river service, which the local administrations are already doing much to secure, and the making of good roads in the labour districts themselves), the completion of those links in the interprovincial railway system which will make it a simple and easy matter for the Behari labourer to journey to Assam for work, and which will at the same time serve to stimulate his settling there, by removing those sentimental ideas of distance and separation that more than anything else at present act as a deterrent upon voluntary and permanent emigration. We have the less hesitation in urging this matter, because experience seems to prove that almost any railway in Bengal must be a profitable investment for Capital. Already lines are under construction which will, when completed, link Betriah, near the Eastern Frontier of the Ghazipore district in the North-Western Provinces, with Peepra Ghat on the eastern limit of Durbhunga. If that line were continued through Burneah and North Dinagepore to Parbuttipore on the Northern Bengal State Railway, the whole of North Behar and the trans-Gangetic portion of the North-West Provinces would, when the Kawnia-Dhubri tramway is finished, be in direct railway communication with Assam. A line from Caragola to Parbuttipore would place the districts of South Behar, Monghyr, and Bhagulpore in an equally favourable position. Each of these lines would pass through tracts of country rich and fertile in ordinary years, but still not altogether secure against famine. Apart, therefore, from their value as emigration routes, they would serve the double purpose of bringing the surplus produce of those tracts more readily to market, and of insuring the districts through which they run against the worst effects of scarcity. On the other side of Bengal we would point out that almost everything has yet to be done to develop the trade of the teeming districts of Dacca, Mymensingh, Sylhet, and Cachar. The Government of Bengal is, we have reason to know fully alive to the great commercial and administrative value of the schemes to which we have referred; and we trust that it will lose no opportunity of pressing them upon the favourable consideration of the Government of India and of Her Majesty's Government.

MINUTE BY MR. H. F. BROWN.

PARAGRAPH 15 alludes to an accelerated river service, which, the Committee has been informed, is being undertaken by Government. I am interested in river steamers. I agree that a daily and accelerated steam service to Assam would be an advantage to that district, and I am aware that European opinion in Assam is almost unanimous upon that point. That is natural. A similar, and probably equally unanimous, opinion prevails amongst passengers by other goods-carrying services, such as the P. & O. Company for example. I do not agree that the proposed acceleration is so urgent as to demand Government interference—certainly not in competition with the liberal offers of private steamer companies.

The history of the river steamer companies is that, when plying on the Ganges, all but one were ruined by the competition of a State-guaranteed railway. The one survivor and another resuscitated company transferred their fleets to the Brahmaputra, where, after having, by much labour and expense, developed an important traffic, they are again threatened with State competition.

This tendency of the Government to engage in trade is alarmingly on the increase, and unless that policy be authoritatively reversed, no private enterprise can be regarded as secure. Thus, we should not be tempted, by the anticipation of special conveniences, to countenance a policy which must seriously interrupt the development of private enterprise in this country.

*Proceedings of the Commission appointed to amend the Labour Districts
Emigration Act VII (B.C.) of 1873.*

THE Commission met at the Bengal Legislative Council Office on Monday, 20th December 1880.

PRESENT :

The President and all the Members of the Commission, and Mr. Forsyth, Assistant Secretary to the Government of Bengal in the Legislative Department.

The President intimated that he had caused to be furnished to each Member of the Commission a selection of the more important papers bearing on the working of Act VII (B.C.) of 1873, and a note showing the history of previous legislation on the subject of emigration to the tea districts. Mr. Macaulay would supplement these papers by a note embodying the result of his recent visits to the recruiting districts of Chota Nagpore and Behar.

2. The President invited an expression of the views of the Members as to the order in which the various questions calling for consideration should be taken up, and as to the most convenient mode of reducing to shape the results of the discussions.

3. Responding to this invitation, Mr. Aitchison submitted a memorandum setting forth his individual opinions as to the policy which the law ought to follow in the matter of the recruitment and protection of labourers.

4. The Commission proceeded to discuss the general subject of free emigration and sirdari recruiting, being the first matter adverted to in Mr. Aitchison's paper.

5. It was agreed that, for the present at any rate, and while the subjects under consideration are of a wide and general character, the most convenient course to follow would be that one or more such subject should be discussed orally at each meeting, without any formal record of the conversation being made, and that, at the following meeting, each Member should come prepared to submit his proposals in a formulated shape for definite acceptance, rejection, or modification by the Commission as a body.

6. In accordance with this arrangement, Members were requested to be prepared at the next meeting of the Commission to submit definite suggestions in connection with the following points :—

Free recruiting; sirdari recruiting; registration of emigrants; medical inspection of intending emigrants; the appointment of local agents to control sirdari recruiters; the control of local depôts for sirdari emigrants in the recruiting districts; the position to be held by contractors in the future.

A. MACKENZIE,

II.

*Proceedings of the Commission appointed to amend the Labour Districts
Emigration Act (VII. B.C. of 1873).*

SECOND MEETING OF THE COMMISSION.

Thursday, 23rd December 1880.

PRESENT :

The President and all the Members, and Mr. Forsyth.

The Commission took into consideration a Note circulated by the President, containing a series of proposals on the subjects of free emigration, sirdari recruiting, contractors, and local agents. The President intimated that Mr. Macaulay concurred in the Note which had been drawn up after discussion with him, and in view of all that had passed at the first meeting of the Commission.

2. On the subject of free emigration the Commission adopted unanimously the following proposition:—

I. Any person coming into or residing in the labour districts, not being an imported labourer under the (new) Act, may enter into a labour contract under the Act for any term permitted by the Act. The employer shall notify the making of each such contract, and shall forward the contract itself for registration to the Inspector within one month from the date of its execution; but it shall not be necessary for the purposes of such registration that the employer should send the contracting labourer before the Inspector: provided that the Inspector may, on his next visiting the garden on which such labourer is employed, cancel any such contract, if the labourer come forward and show good cause for this, but not otherwise. It shall be open to the employer, instead of himself putting the labourer on contract as above provided, to produce the intending labourer before the Inspector or before any Magistrate, and have the contract executed in the presence of such Inspector or Magistrate, and attested by him. No contract so attested shall be liable to be cancelled by the Inspector in the manner above provided.

3. It is implied in the foregoing proposition that the Act need take no cognizance of persons emigrating to the Labour Districts of their own free will, even though they may procure the means of doing so from an employer of labour, provided that no contract or engagement to contract is recognized as subsisting between the emigrant and his would-be employer. The employer takes all the risk of any advances he may make, and recover them, if at all, only as an ordinary debt. It was resolved that the proposition should be held to apply to all classes of free immigrants, time-expired labourers, and local labourers whom it was desired to bring under the provisions of any special local contract law, such as may be hereafter proposed for embodiment in the new Act. It remains of course open to any such labourer to enter only into an ordinary civil contract, and to any employer to engage his local labourers only under the sanction of the ordinary contract law.

4. On the subject of contractors and their recruiters, it was resolved that, while it was very desirable to get rid absolutely of the whole system, it was better to effect this indirectly by making sirdari recruiting more simple and effective. The following proposition was adopted:—

II. The provisions of the existing law on the subject of contractors and their recruiters shall be maintained, subject only to such alterations in detail as may be rendered necessary by the other changes proposed in the law, or may be suggested by past experience.

5. As a matter of general principle, it was resolved that the Act should be simplified as much as possible in the earlier chapters, regarding such subjects as contractors, recruiters, and transport, by giving a power to Government to make and revise rules providing for all points of detail.

6. On the subject of sirdari recruiting, the following propositions were adopted:—

III.—Employers may appoint any contract labourer, male or female, in their employ to act as a sirdar-recruiter.

IV.—Every such sirdar shall receive from his employer a certificate, in which shall be set out clearly—

- (a) the name of the employer and of the sirdar;
- (b) the estate for which the sirdar is authorized to engage labourers;
- (c) the remuneration the sirdar is to receive while on recruiting duty;
- (d) the number of labourers he is authorized to engage;
- (e) the terms he is empowered to offer them;
- (f) the place at which he is to register and put them on contract;
- (g) whether he is required to have them medically examined as to their fitness for labour before registration;
- (h) the local agent (if any) to whom he is to report himself for orders;

- (i) the amount of money advanced him, or for which he is to account;
- (j) the term of absence allowed him from the garden,
- (k) such other special conditions or directions as the employer may deem necessary.

The certificate must be produced by the sirdar before the Inspector or the Magistrate of the district or sub-division in which the employer's estate is situated, and be signed and accepted by him in the presence of such Inspector or Magistrate, who shall himself countersign the certificate, unless he consider that the sirdar is an improper person to be employed as a recruiter, when he may refuse his countersignature. The certificate shall, subject to any special limitations imposed by the employer, hold good for the term of one year from the date thereof, but may be renewed on the application of the employer to the countersigning Inspector or Magistrate, without the personal appearance of either the employer or the sirdar.

V.—The sirdar shall be liable to punishment on conviction before a Magistrate in any district where he may be found, and on the prosecution of his employer, or his attorney, or his local agent (as defined below), for failure to report himself to a local agent, failure to return within the specified term, or failure to account for moneys advanced (the penalty to be fixed in the Act; but such provision shall not interfere with any penalty to which the sirdar may be liable under the Penal Code, provided that he shall not be twice punished for what is practically the same offence).

VI.—The sirdar's certificate may be cancelled, and he himself punished by fine, on conviction by any Magistrate, on the complaint of the employer or his local agent, for the following offences:—

- (a) If he make over any labourers recruited by him to any contractor or contractor's recruiter, or to the sirdar or local agent of any other employer.
- (b) If he allow any labourers recruited by contractors or their recruiters to share the accommodation provided by him for his employer's labourers, or place his employer's labourers in any contractor's depot.

VII.—The sirdar must either himself accompany the labourers recruited by him to the labour districts, or send with them some competent deputy approved by the employer's local agent, or, if there be no local agent, by the registering officer in the district of recruitment.

VIII.—The sirdar may, subject to the conditions of his certificate, recruit any number of labourers; but there shall be at least one sirdar or deputy sirdar in personal charge of each gang of 20 labourers (exclusive of dependents) despatched from the recruiting district. With the written consent of the local agent of his employer, a sirdar or his deputy may take charge of the labourers of other employers proceeding to the labour districts, up to the aforesaid limit of 20 for the amalgamated gangs. There shall be no restriction on gangs travelling together, provided that each is in personal charge of a sirdar or his deputy.

IX.—The sirdar may have his labourers registered and put on contract either in the district of recruitment, or at any one of such registering stations on the way to the Labour Districts as the local Government may from time to time appoint for that purpose.

X.—Any such registering officer as is referred to in the preceding proposition may decline to register any labourer, if it appear that the labourer does not understand the terms of the contract, or is for any reasonable cause unwilling to enter into the same; and if the district in which such labourer is produced before him is not the district of the labourer's recruitment, may cause him to be returned to such district at the cost of the employer of the recruiting sirdar.

XI.—Any labourer who, without reasonable cause or excuse, refuses to enter into contract after being brought before a registering officer in any district other than the district of his recruitment, shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be punishable with fine, which shall not exceed the expense incurred on his account by the sirdar or his deputy, up to a maximum of Rs. 20.

XII.—For each labourer produced before any duly authorized officer for registration, there shall be paid a fee of Rs. . . .

XIII.—Any registering officer, and any Superintendent of Embarkation, may, if himself a medical man, examine, and if not himself a medical man, send for examination by such, any labourer or dependent who may appear to him unfit to travel, or affected with any disease dangerous to others: and if such labourer or dependent be on examination pronounced to be unfit to travel, or so diseased as to be dangerous to others, he may be detained in hospital until his recovery: after which he shall be forwarded to the labour district or returned to his home as the employer may request. All costs of such detention and forwardal or return to be borne by the employer. No fee shall be charged for the medical examination under this proposition. Near relations of any labourer or dependent detained shall have the option of remaining with him.

XIV.—If the employer, in his sirdar's certificate, has directed a medical examination of the labourers before registration, the registering officer shall satisfy himself that the sirdar has carried out this instruction. Such medical examination may be made by any medical officer in the service of Government, on payment of a fee of eight annas for each labourer examined, or by any qualified medical man, on such terms as the employer may arrange. The medical examiner shall, if so required, satisfy himself that the labourer is in a fit state of physical health to journey to and undertake agricultural labour in the labour district, and shall in all cases grant the sirdar an acknowledgment of the fee paid to him on account of each labourer examined.

XV.—Failure on the part of the sirdar or his deputy to put the labourer on contract as above provided, in accordance with the terms of his certificate, or abandonment of the labourer anywhere on the road to the labour district, or failure to supply the labourer with proper food and accommodation on the way, shall warrant any Magistrate in returning the labourer to his home at the expense of his employer, and render the sirdar liable to punishment on conviction before a Magistrate.

XVI.—Any sirdar proposing to collect labourers at any central spot, with a view to their subsequent despatch to the labour districts, shall notify to the Magistrate of the district or sub-division the position and nature of the accommodation provided for such intending labourers. Such Magistrate shall have power to inspect such accommodation, or cause it to be inspected and visited from time to time, in order to see that proper sanitary arrangements are made, such as would be enforceable under any law for the regulation of municipalities in the district in question, but shall not otherwise interfere. Such Magistrate shall, however, have power to order the release of any intending labourer unwillingly detained, or deemed by a medical officer unfit to travel, or so diseased as to be dangerous to others.

XVII.—For the better control of his sirdars, any employer may apply to the local Government to license a local agent or agents to represent him in the recruiting districts or elsewhere. One local agent may represent any number of employers, but the name of each such employer shall be distinctly specified in the license. Additional names shall be inserted in the license only by the Magistrate of the district or sub-division in which the agent works, in accordance with the orders of Government passed on the application of such additional employers. No person holding a contractor's license shall be licensed as a local agent.

XVIII.—Local agents shall be competent to prosecute sirdars for breach of the conditions of their certificates, and shall generally represent their employers in all matters connected with the engagement of labourers. Their licenses may be cancelled by the Magistrate of the district, (subject to an appeal to Government), if it be shown to his satisfaction that they have employed contractors' recruiters to engage labourers, or permitted any contractors' labourers to use the accommodation provided for sirdars' labourers, or allowed any sirdar under their control to transfer labourers to contractors or their recruiters, or to any other employers, or themselves taken over any sirdars' labourers for despatch to any other employer, or failed to see that any orders of the Magistrate under proposition XVI have been duly carried out by any sirdars under their control.

XVIII.—A local agent holding a license under proposition XVII may be specially licensed by Government to engage labourers in any particular district direct and without the intervention of sirdars for any employer specified in his license.

Proceedings of the Commission appointed to amend the Labor Districts Emigration Act, VII (B.C.) of 1873.

THIRD MEETING OF THE COMMISSION.

27th December 1880.

PRESENT:

The President, and all the Members, and Mr. Forsyth.

THE Commission considered, settled, and finally approved the record of the proceedings at its last meeting. On the question raised by Dr. Grant, whether a sirdar recruiting labourers should be bound to register them in the district or at the first registering station passed by him, it was held to be undesirable to impose any such limitations. Registration would ordinarily take place where the employer had his local agent, and it was obviously to the interest of the employer to save the risk of unnecessary expense in returning a labourer to his district under the orders of the registering officer, by having him put on contract as soon as possible.

2. The Commission then proceeded to discuss a joint note by Messrs. Hare and Aitchison, on the subject of the labour contract and other cognate matters. The following propositions were unanimously agreed to:—

I.—Contracts under the Act may be for any term desired by the parties, up to a maximum limit of five years.

II.—The minimum rate of wages shall be prescribed by the Act, and shall for the first three years of the contract be, in the case of men Rs. 5 per mensem, and in the case of women Rs. 4 per mensem for a completed daily task, and at those rates for tasks not completed in proportion to the work actually done. In the fourth and fifth years of the contract the minimum rate of monthly wages for the same amount of task work shall be Rs. 6 in the case of men and Rs. 5 in the case of women.

III.—Every employer shall from time to time fix the daily tasks to be executed by his labourers, and shall frame a schedule of the same, and file a copy of every such schedule in a book which shall be open to the examination of the Inspector. A copy of each such schedule in the Bengali language shall be posted at the door of the pay office or some other convenient place accessible to the labourers. But it shall not be necessary to obtain the previous sanction of the Inspector to the schedule, and it shall not be necessary to send him a copy of the same unless he shall so request. The minimum payment for each daily task shall be the quotient resulting from dividing the minimum monthly wage of the labourer concerned by the whole number of days in the current calendar month.

IV.—No labourer shall be bound to work more than six days in one week, or more than six hours consecutively, or more than nine hours in any one day; and the labourer shall, on one day in seven, receive wages as for a full task done, without being required to work for the same. The employer shall, on six days in each week, provide for each labourer work sufficient to enable him to earn at least his minimum daily wage. Failing such due provision of work, the labourer shall be entitled to claim his minimum daily wage; but no such payment need be made to any labourer who absents himself on any working day for his own pleasure or convenience.

V.—The Inspector shall have power at any time, if he considers any schedule of daily tasks, or any part thereof, to be unreasonable, to order in writing a reduction of the same. The employer, if dissatisfied with the Inspector's order, shall be at liberty, after in the first place carrying it out, to request a reference to a Committee constituted in the manner provided in section 108 of the present Act. The decision of the Committee shall be final. The Inspector may, notwithstanding the existence of such a general schedule of tasks as is above provided for, order that any individual labourer who is from weakness unable to earn by his labour the sum of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  annas per diem, shall receive subsistence allowance at the rate of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  annas per diem, or diet on a scale to be approved by the Inspector.

3. The Commission considered that the foregoing provisions in regard to the contract and the regulation of labour would fully meet the requirements of tea-planters, without being unfair to the labourers. It was deemed undesirable to fix any higher minimum rate of wage than Rs. 6 in the later years of contract, because to do so would disturb the existing rate for local labour in many parts of the labour districts. At the same time it was believed that if care were taken that no increase in the amount of task-work were allowed, merely on the ground of increased efficiency of the labourer, labourers in their fourth and fifth years, and even earlier, would generally be able to earn much more than the minimum wage. Dr. Grant suggested for consideration that the higher minimum (of Rs. 6 and Rs. 5 for men and women respectively) might be given in the third year of contract; but a strong opinion being expressed by other members that the rates proposed above were fully as high as the tea industry could afford, it was resolved to maintain the proposition in the foregoing shape (II).

4. The Commission discussed the provisions of Chapter XI of the existing Act, regarding Incapacity for labour. It was agreed to supplement section 110, which empowers the Inspector to suspend the contract of labourers temporarily unfitted for labour, by the following proposition:—

VI.—Any labourer may absent himself from work, on account of sickness, for a period which shall not exceed the number of 30 days in any twelve calendar months, reckoning from the date of his contract, and shall receive for each such day of absence subsistence allowance at the rate of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  annas, or, if in hospital, sick diet on a scale to be approved by the Inspector.

If the absence is for sufficient reason prolonged beyond the number of 30 days in any one year, subsistence allowance or sick diet shall be supplied as above, but each such day of absence in excess of 30 may be added to the term of the contract, unless the labourer shall refund to the employer the sum of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  annas for each such day of absence in excess of 30. The employer shall be bound to give to the labourer a written notice when he has been in this manner absent from work for the permitted number of 30 days, and the Inspector shall from time to time, when visiting the garden, endorse on the labourer's contract, after such enquiry as may be necessary, the number of days which he has thus to make good.

It was held that the foregoing was a reasonable way of providing for cases of casual absence from sickness, section 110 being left to meet prolonged incapacity from serious illness, pregnancy, and similar causes. The Commission saw no reason for altering the provisions of sections 110, 111, or 112 of the present Act.

5. Chapter XII of the Act, regarding "Necessary provision for labourers," was then discussed. At present Government has, under section 4, clause 12 of the Act, power to make rules regarding the supply of rice, which is the only article of food that the employer is bound under section 113 to provide for his labourers. The Commission, in view of the large number of Behar coolies now likely to go to the labour districts, and after considering the other provisions of Chapter XII, agreed to the following propositions:—

VII.—The Government shall be empowered to make rules to provide for the supply to the labourers by their employers of the staple grain ordinarily used by each class of labourers, when this is not procurable at reasonable prices in the local markets near the gardens. The local Government shall from time to time determine, either generally or for each district or part of a district, what shall be deemed to be reasonable prices in the local markets, and the prices at which food-grains shall be supplied by employers.

VIII.—The Inspector shall have power to order that (a) any particular class of labourers on any garden, or (b) all the labourers on any particular garden, shall be furnished with rations by their employer for any period dating from their arrival on the garden up to three months. The Inspector may exempt any individual labourer from the effect of any such general order, if it be shown that he is able to earn a full wage, and desires to provide himself with proper food. The Inspector may at any time order that any individual labourer shall be put on rations for any term up to six months, and may from time to time renew such order. The scale of rations shall in all cases be determined by the Inspector, who shall also direct whether they are to be given cooked or uncooked. The cost of each labourer's ration, calculated at current rates as determined from time to time by the Inspector, shall be deducted from any wages earned by the labourer during the period for which the Inspector's order is in force. Any person buying labourers' rations, and any labourer selling his rations, shall be punishable with fine or imprisonment, on conviction by any Magistrate.

IX.—The employer shall not be bound by law to provide hospital accommodation on every garden, or to entertain a particular class of medical attendant for any specific number of labourers. The law shall merely provide that the employer shall satisfy the Inspector that sufficient accommodation has been provided and is available for his labourers within a reasonable distance of their habitations, and that due provision has been made for their medical care and treatment. The Local Government shall have power to make rules regarding these points, providing for central hospitals, circle doctors, and the payment by employers of charges for treatment of their labourers in any Government hospital.

X.—In other respects the provisions of chapter XII of the Act call for no change.

Proposition VIII embodies the conclusions of the Commission as to the extent to which it is safe to go in the introduction of the system of rationing advocated by Dr. DeRenzy and the Chief Commissioner.

Proceedings of the Commission appointed to amend the Labour Districts Emigration Act VII (B.O.) of 1873.

FOURTH MEETING OF THE COMMISSION.

Thursday, 30th December 1880.

PRESENT:

The President, and all the Members, and Mr. Forsyth.

THE Commission considered, settled, and finally approved the record of the proceedings at its last meeting.

2. Chapter XIII of the Act, relating to "Localities unfit for the residence of Labourers," was then considered. The President pointed out that, as the law now stands, under section 118 it is only when a garden appears unhealthy from natural causes—"climate, situation, or condition"—that the opinion of a committee is invited to determine the question of its being closed. Under section 119, when a high mortality induces the local Government to order a medical officer to investigate its causes, it is only if this mortality be shown to arise from the want of due care and precaution, and of the adoption of proper and available sanitary measures on the part of the employer, that the Government can order the garden to be closed; but it can give this order without any reference to a committee. The Commission, after deliberation, resolved that no change was necessary in the provisions of chapter XIII, beyond embodying in section 118 the provisions of Assam Regulation IV of 1877, under which a garden may, if necessary, be closed against any particular class of labour, without being altogether prevented from employing imported labour, or other labour under the Act.

3. The Commission next considered chapter XIV of the Act,—"Offences committed by Labourers." To meet the case of unlawful absence from work, it was decided that section 121 of the Act, providing a penalty on a conviction for such absence before a Magistrate, should be amended in accordance with the following proposition:—

I.—Instead of proceeding before the Magistrate, the employer may certify to the Inspector, on or before the 15th of each month, the names of all or any of his labourers unlawfully absent from work during the preceding calendar month, and shall at the same time notify the fact that he has done so to each labourer concerned. The Inspector shall, when next visiting the garden, enquire, in the presence of the labourer charged, into each such case of unlawful absence, and shall endorse such days of unlawful absence on the labourer's contract, and add them to the term of the contract, unless the labourer shall consent to forfeit to his employer the sum of four annas for each such day of absence. If any labourer has been unlawfully absent from work for more than seven days, he may be prosecuted before a Magistrate, and on conviction may be sentenced to lose all claim to wages for the period of such absence, and to forfeit to his employers the sum of four annas for each such day of absence, and may be further rigorously imprisoned for a term not exceeding fourteen days: and if his unlawful absence has extended to twenty days in any two consecutive months, this period of imprisonment may be extended to one month.

4. It was decided to adopt the recommendations of the Chief Commissioner on the matter of "Desertion" (section 123 of the Act), as set forth in paragraph 26 of his Secretary's letter No. 2065 of the 28th October 1880, that is to say —

II.—An employer may arrest a deserting labourer without warrant, wherever found, in any part of the labour districts, provided he be not found in the service of another employer. The employer shall forthwith take such arrested labourer to the police-station nearest to the place of arrest, and there the statements of both parties shall be recorded and forwarded for orders to the Magistrate having jurisdiction. The employer may then convey the labourer direct to the garden. The Magistrate may, however, if he think fit, summon both parties before him, and require the employer to proceed by complaint, as provided in the latter clauses of section 122. If the garden be not situated within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate to whom the statements are in the first instance forwarded by the police, such Magistrate shall at once send them for disposal to the Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the garden lies.

5. The Commission considered the advisability of recommending the repeal of section 124 of the Act, under which the labourer's contract is cancelled after he has actually suffered six months' imprisonment for desertion. It was resolved that the section should stand, the cases in which it comes into operation being rare, and such as are probably most equitably met by the cancellation of the contract.

6. It was decided, in accordance with the recommendation of the Chief Commissioner, to adopt the following modification of section 128 :—

III.—The punishment for enticing away, harbouring or employing, or attempting to entice from his employment, any labourer under contract, shall be fine (the whole or any portion of which may be awarded to the labourer's employer) or rigorous imprisonment which may extend to one month, or both.

7. The following proposition was also adopted :—

IV.—Any labourer guilty of habitual drunkenness, or wilfully disregarding any sanitary regulation approved by the Inspector and duly notified for the guidance of the labourers, shall be liable, on conviction by a Magistrate, to fine which may amount to Rs. 5, or rigorous imprisonment which may extend to one week.

The offence of habitual drunkenness is taken cognizance of in several of the colonial ordinances, and is a subject of complaint on many gardens. Looking to the responsibility placed on the employer of carrying out proper sanitary regulations, and the risk he runs of having his garden closed on account of preventible mortality, it was considered only fair to give him the means of punishing recalcitrant labourers who may set at defiance any sanitary order endorsed by the Inspector as proper and necessary.

8. The Commission next considered chapter XV of the Act, relating to "Complaints made by Labourers." It was decided that sections 129 and 130, which require the employer to give notice to the Inspector if any labourer wishes to complain, and section 130, which provides a penalty for untrue or frivolous complaints, should be modified in accordance with the following proposition :—

V.—If any labourer desires to make a complaint to the Inspector or to any Magistrate, the employer shall be bound forthwith to send him to the Inspector or Magistrate : and if the complaint is, on enquiry, declared to be untrue or frivolous, the labourer may be sentenced to pay reasonable compensation to his employer, besides making good the days of his own absence.

9. It was resolved that section 134, which provides for the award to the labourer of wages in arrear for two months, plus compensation for their being withheld, should be modified so as to cover also the case of wages withheld for any period after the determination of a labourer's contract.

10. The Commission next considered chapter XVI, relating to "Determination of Contract." The question of making the grant of a certificate of discharge compulsory on the employer, in every case of determination of a contract, was discussed, and its decision postponed. In the matter of the redemption of contracts the following proposition was adopted :—

VI. The value of the unexpired term of contract for purposes of redemption shall be deemed to be the aggregate amount of one rupee for every month of the unexpired portion of the first year, of three rupees for every such month of the second year, and of five rupees for every such month of the third, fourth, or fifth years of the original term of the labourer's engagement.

11. After considering chapter IX of the Act, regarding "Inspectors' Returns and Magistrates' Inspections," it was resolved as follows :—

VII.—Returns shall be submitted by employers in such form and at such times as the local Government may by rule direct, it being understood that every endeavour will be made to render this obligation as little troublesome as possible to employers.

VIII.—Returns shall be submitted for all gardens employing any labourers under the Act, and such returns shall embrace all persons working on such gardens, whether under the Act or not, who are not actually natives of the labour districts. Returns may also be required for all gardens employing persons who are not labourers under the Act, if such persons are not natives of the labour districts.

IX.—Employers shall keep in addition to the register of labourers prescribed by section 102, a monthly pay register showing the actual earnings of each labourer, all deductions made from such earnings, and all balances due to each labourer; such pay register to be open to the Inspector or any Magistrate visiting the garden.

X.—The duties of the Inspector may be left to be defined by rule.

A. MACKENZIE,

President.

Proceedings of the Commission appointed to amend the Labour Districts Emigration Act VII (B.C.) of 1873.

FIFTH MEETING OF THE COMMISSION.

Monday, 3rd January 1881.

PRESENT:

The President and all the Members.

THE Commission considered, settled, and finally approved the record of the proceedings at its last meeting.

2. The Commission then resumed consideration of the question of making discharge certificates compulsory. Some of the members expressed a fear that to force such certificates, as it were, on the labourers would needlessly suggest to them the idea of removing to another garden, and thus throw difficulties in the way of re-engagements. But as it was admitted that every labourer is even now perfectly aware of the very day on which his contract terminates, and looking to the check upon illegal enticement which the introduction of a system of regular "papers" would supply, the Commission eventually adopted the following proposition:—

I. When an employer or his representative enters into a contract under the Act with any number of labourers, the terms of which are the same for all the labourers engaged, it shall not be necessary for each labourer to execute and sign a separate contract, but it shall suffice if all the labourers sign one copy of the contract, to be retained by the employer. But each labourer shall receive a copy of the contract, to be kept by him, which shall be signed by the employer; and upon this shall be endorsed by the employer, on the determination of the contract, the fact and manner of such determination. Refusal to make such endorsement, on presentation of the contract for such purpose by the labourer, shall be punishable by fine; and the Inspector shall have power to make such endorsement if the employer declines to do so. Sections 136 and 138 of the Act shall be modified accordingly.

3. The Commission read and considered, in connection with Chapter VIII of the Act, correspondence and statements relating to the "Inland Labour Transport Fund." After considerable discussion the following propositions were adopted:—

I.—It is not desirable that the funds raised under the Labour Districts Emigration Act should be applied in any other way than in carrying out the immediate purposes of the Act itself. If funds are required for improving or opening out communications, and for such like purposes, these can be more equitably raised by either local or general taxation. The principles suggested by the Government of India in its letter to the Government of Bengal, No. 103 of the 27th May 1880 (parapgraph 8), are unanimously endorsed by all those directly interested in the tea industry, and ought, in the opinion of the Commission, to be accepted as conclusive.

II.—The maximum limit of the fees leviable under the Act should be reduced to one rupee per head for registration and capitation fees alike; but the actual fees imposed should be so regulated from year to year as to give, with the other receipts of the Fund, an income sufficient only to meet the cost of the necessary establishments and other ordinary charges of the Fund, being such as are contemplated either in the Act itself or in the Rules drawn up by Government to give effect to it. Any surplus income accruing should be applied in reduction of the rates of fees, and not otherwise.

4. The Commission observed that as capitation fees would be recoverable on account of all labourers under the Act, the income of the Fund from that source would probably be found sufficient for the purposes of the Act, if such fees were levied at the rate of eight annas only per head. The capitation fee should be made as low as possible, but the registration fee, which is paid once for all, might, if Government thought fit, be levied at the maximum rate.

5. The official members of the Commission desired to have it recorded that they accepted the foregoing conclusions arrived at by the non-official members, on the ground that it was chiefly for those interested in the tea industry to say whether they were willing to tax themselves specially for the improvement of their communications.

6. The non-official members of the Commission desired to record their high appreciation of the steps taken by the Government of Bengal and the Assam Administration to open up communications with the labour districts. They believed there was no desire on the part of those they represent to raise the question as to how far the Government were justified in the past in expending on these objects the large balances at credit of the Labour Transport Fund. But they were not prepared to admit that the income of the Fund should be kept at a high level in the future, either to enable the Government to subsidize a river steam service, or to open up roads or railways. They also felt bound to point out that the districts in the Surma Valley have received no benefit whatever from the expenditure of the surplus balances to which those districts very largely contributed; and they suggested that if, on the adjustment of accounts as between Provincial Funds and the Labour Transport Fund, any balance accrued before the passing of the new Act were found to be in hand, a fair allotment should be made to local works in Cachar and Sylhet.

7. The Commission decided strongly to recommend the early completion of lines of railway communication from the recruiting districts of Behar to the labor district, as, for instance, (1) along some one or other of the lines of the northern emigration roads for North Behar emigrants, and (2) from Caragola via Dinagepore for South Behar emigrants. They also considered it most desirable that the question of extending railway communication in the direction of the Surma Valley should be taken up by Government at an early date.

Proceedings of the Commission appointed to amend the Labour Districts Emigration Act VII (B.C.) of 1873.

SIXTH MEETING OF THE COMMISSION.

Tuesday, 4th January 1881.

PRESENT:

The President, and all the Members.

The Commission considered, settled, and finally approved the record of the proceedings at its last meeting.

2. The Commission commenced the examination of the earlier sections of the Act, and made the following notes :

(1.) Section 3.—The definitions of “Emigrant” and “Labourer” should be altered thus:—“Emigrant” means any native of India of the age of 16 years or upwards, not being a native of the labour districts, who proceeds to such districts for the purpose of labouring therein for hire.” “Labourer” means any person who has entered into a contract with an employer under the provisions of this Act, or of Act VII (B.C.) of 1873, during the duration of such contract.” “Dependent” should be defined to include any women (not being women under contract), any children, and any aged or incapacitated relatives or friends accompanying any emigrant labourer with the consent of a contractor, recruiter, garden-sirdar, or local agent, as the case may be.” The wording of the Act should be modified throughout with reference to these definitions. “Local Agent” should be defined to mean any person licensed under the provisions of this Act as a local agent.”

(2.) Section 4.—A power should be taken to make rules—

(a.) defining the duties of the Inspectors; and

(b.) providing for the returns to be submitted by employers.

Clause (12) should be amended to provide for the ‘supply of food-grains’ (instead of rice only), and for the ‘rationing system.’ Much of the matter under the heading of “transport” might also probably be met by Rules.

(3.) Section 6.—Any person of the age of 16 years or upwards should be allowed to contract.

(4.) Section 7.—Should be modified so as to show that—“Nothing contained in the Act shall prevent any native of India from entering into a contract to labour in the labour districts otherwise than under the provisions of this Act; but no emigrant shall be bound to fulfil any contract of labour upon any estate, or portion of an estate, which has been declared unfit for the residence of labourers, or of the class of labourers to which he belongs under the provisions of section 118 or 119.”

(5.) Section 9.—All fines under the Act should be made distinctly recoverable under the Criminal Procedure Code.

(6.) Section 10.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal should have power to prohibit emigration from any district, or part of any district, in his jurisdiction, and the Chief Commissioner of Assam should have power to prohibit immigration to any labour district, or part of any labour district, either generally or as regards any particular class of immigrant: the sanction of the Government of India being required in either case. The section need not define the cases in which this power may be exercised.

(7.) Section 12.—Power to appoint registering officers and registering stations is required.

(8.) Section 13.—Will require amplification to meet the propositions on sirdari-recruiting accepted by the Commission.

(9.) Section 15.—Should run thus—

“A contract executed under the provisions of this Act shall in no case exceed the term of five years from the date of its execution. Every such contract shall be in the form in Schedule A annexed to this Act, and shall be reduced to writing, and shall specify the monthly rate of wages in money, the period of service, the name of the district in which the service is to be performed, and, if the labourer shall so desire, the name of the estate on which the labourer is to work. Provided that in no case shall the rate of monthly wages for the first three years of the contract term be less than Rs. 5 in the case of a man, and Rs. 4 in the case of a woman, for a completed daily task regulated in accordance with the provisions of this Act: or less than Rs. 6 in the case of a man, and Rs. 5 in the case of a woman, for the same amount of task-work, in the fourth and fifth years of the contract term.

Provided further that nothing in the contract shall prevent the deputation of any labourer to act as a garden-sirdar for the purpose of recruiting other labourers, but all periods of absence on such deputation shall be included in the term of the garden-sirdar's labour contract.

(12.) Section 40.—The conditions for grant of licenses to recruiters may be left to be regulated by rule in the manner proposed at pages 4 and 5 of Dr. Grant's letter No. 1676 of the 16th August 1880.

Proceedings of the Commission appointed to amend the Labour Districts Emigration Act VII (B.C.) of 1873.

SEVENTH MEETING OF THE COMMISSION.

Thursday, 6th January 1881.

PRESENT:

The President, and all the Members.

THE Commission considered, settled, and finally approved the record of the proceedings at its last meeting.

2. The Commission resumed the consideration of the alterations required in some of the details of the present Act, and made the following notes:—

(1.) Section 21.—The register should also show the dependents of each labourer distinctly.

(2.) Section 24.—As each labourer will receive a copy of his contract, the last two clauses of this section are not required. But every garden-sirdar, bringing up a gang for registration, should present to the registering officer a nominal 'way-bill,' in a form to be laid down by Government, showing each labourer and his dependents in the gang. This should be attested as correct by the registering officer, and failure to obtain his signature should be made punishable. This way-bill should accompany the gang and be produced en route on demand made by any magisterial or police officer, or officer of the Emigration Department. It should be presented to the Embarkation Agent, who should note on it casualties up to that point, and countersign it as an embarkation pass. The sirdar should then make it over to the master of the vessel, who would keep it until the gang reached its landing place. The master should then note on it all casualties on board and make it over to the sirdar. (The medical officer of the steamer might also be required to certify on it the state of health of the labourers at leaving.) The sirdar should next present the way-bill to the Debarkation Officer for check and signature, and lastly make it over to his employer, who, after noting casualties since landing, with the date of arrival and condition of the gang, should transmit it to the Inspector for return to the Superintendent of Emigration.

A similar system of way-bills might be used for contractors' coolies, and the papers connected with transport be simplified considerably.

The registering officers need then only forward to the Superintendent abstract returns showing the numbers in each gang with the sirdar's name (or the contractor's and recruiter's, as the case might be), and similarly the masters of vessels need not submit a detailed embarkation list, but an abstract showing disposal of gangs.

In the case of gangs marching up, the way-bill should be submitted to the Superintendent of Embarkation if they pass through his station; but it will suffice if the employer note all casualties at the close of the journey, and forward the way-bill to the Inspector as above.

(3.) Section 33.—Contractors' agents in the recruiting districts might be licensed for a fee of Rs. 50.

(4.) Section 40.—The Superintendent should not grant a license to a recruiter unless satisfied by recent evidence that the Magistrate of the recruiting district approves of the man, and unless he is satisfied that accommodation has been provided in the district by the contractor employing the recruiter or by his agent for all labourers recruited by him.

(5.) Section 53.—The Medical Inspector should not enquire as to fitness to labour unless requested by the employer's agent or by contractor, and only then on payment of a fee of 8 annas.

(6.) Sections 62 to 66.—It would be better to license vessels generally for carrying 'native passengers' to the labour districts, taking powers in the Act to make any special provision required for labourers.

(7.) Sections 67 and 68.—The Embarkation Agent should have power to forbid the taking on board of any native passenger suffering from dangerous contagious disease. The nominal list might be dispensed with; a statement of the number of all native passengers not being labourers, and of all 'gangs' of labourers, being substituted.

(8.) Section 69.—Omit the words "under the supervision of the Embarkation Agent" in line 1, and "at the time of the embarkation of such emigrants."

(9.) Section 70.—Substitute a power to require any vessel to carry a medical officer licensed by the Superintendent, and require owners to dispense with the services of any medical officer on Superintendent's orders.

(10.) Section 72.—Stoppage need only be required at such places and for such times as Government may by rule prescribe.

(11.) Section 75.—Should be modified to enable the Magistrate to direct the landing of any native passenger suffering from contagious disease.

(12.) Sections 76, 77, 82 and 83.—Expenses incurred by the Magistrate under these sections should be recoverable under the Public Demands Act.

(13.) Sections 81, 83, 84, and 85.—Much of the matter might be regulated by rules instead of cumbering the Act.

(14.) Section 95.—The pensionary and leave allowances of establishments should be made payable from the Fund.

Proceedings of the Commission appointed to amend the Labour Districts Emigration Act VII (B.C.) of 1873.

ELEVENTH MEETING OF THE COMMISSION.

Thursday, the 20th January 1881.

PRESENT:

The President and all the Members.

THE Commission finally passed the draft Bill and signed its Report.

2. Mr. Brown requested that a Minute by him might be appended to the Report. On behalf of the Inland Steam Companies he felt bound to protest against any direct interference on the part of Government with the development of the river service to Assam. Papers had been communicated to the Commission, from which it appeared that Government was in fact starting an accelerated steam service on its own account from Dhubri. He heartily sympathised with the desire of all interested in Assam to see a swift river service inaugurated; but he objected strongly to this being taken up by Government, when private companies were both able and willing to start such a service on what appeared to him to be reasonable terms. One Company had, on the 6th December last, submitted proposals to Government, which he thought would, if known, be considered liberal.

3. Upon the President's moving "that the Commission do now dissolve," Mr. Brown moved, and Mr. Inglis seconded, a motion that the following resolution should first be placed on the record of the proceedings:—

Resolved—"That the thanks of the Members be tendered to their President, Mr. Mackenzie, in acknowledgment of the great assistance they have derived from his able conduct of the business in hand."

The motion was unanimously adopted by the votes of the Members.

4. The Commission was then dissolved.

A. MACKENZIE,
President.
